The writing process and evaluation

It's a good idea to start with a mind - map when preparing an essay. Always write a draft before writing up the final version. Your essay should be all your own work: plagiarism is a very serious offence in most colleges and universities. There is usually a deadline. After the essay is submitted, it will be assessed and usually you can get feedback.

Thanuri : Can you please help me to complete my assignment.

Adrian : Sure, what do you want me to do?

Thanuri : I have to write an essay on “Ethnic Issues” but I don’t know how to start it.

Adrian : You have to begin with a (1)mindmap..... It will help you to organize the facts.

Thanuri :O.K, What should I do next?

Adrian : You need to get good marks for your essay, when it is (2) ; don’t you?

Thanuri : Yes, I must. I can collect facts.

Adrian : Then write a (3) and edit it before the final version. But don’t forget one thing.

Thanuri :What is it?

Adrian : You can’t steal other’s essays, It’s called (4) It is considered as an (5)

Thanuri : Got it, I’ll never do that.

Adrian : Good. Don’t forget to submit your essay before the (6)

Thanuri : Thank you very much, Adrian.

Test 07 - Read the following text and answer the questions

(5 marks)

People began to race cars very soon after they were invented. The first race took place in France in 1894. It was won by Count de Dion in a steam - powered car that went at an average speed of 18km/h. Today family cars can go 10 times faster than that and supercars, racing cars and sports cars, go even faster. For safety reasons, most countries have speed limits on their roads, so racing cars are driven on special tracks. The highest level in car racing is called Formula One. During the long races, cars often pull off the track to be refueled and have their tires changed. The famous Italian Ferrari cars have been running in Formula One races since 1948. Ferrari also makes luxury sports cars. Many people admire the latest models, but a few can afford to buy them.

1. When did the first car race take place?
2. Why are the racing cars driven on special tracks?
3. Why do the cars pull off track, during the long races? Write two reasons.

Somewhere in Kensington, there was an avenue of tall houses, rich but empty, that looked like a terrace of tombs. The steps to the dark front doors seemed very steep.

There was a row of houses or flats converted from stables into small eateries in a small street between two of the tall mansions. There was something cheery in their dinginess and something free in their insignificance.

Anyone passing the place during any autumn evening might see a hand pull aside the red half-blind which half hid the interior from the street, and face peering out like an innocent mischievous creature. It was the face of Father Brown, who was a former priest of Cobhole in Essex and now working in London.

His friend, Flambeau, a semi-official investigator, was sitting opposite him at a small table close to the window and making his notes of a case he had cleared up. Just then father Brown got up, went to the window, pulled the curtain back and looked out.

When a stranger in the street had passed the window, he let the curtain fall into its place again. Then his round eyes rolled to the large white lettering on the window above his head and then strayed to the table next to where Flambeau was sitting. There were a cup of tea, cheese, young girl with red hair and a glass of milk.

"If you've got ten minutes, Father Brown said softly when Flambeau was putting away his pocket book, "I would like you to follow that man with the false nose."

Flambeau looked up in surprise. The girl with the red hair also looked up but with something that was stranger than astonishment. She was simply and even loosely dressed in light brown sacking stuff.

"The man with the false nose"? repeated Flambeau. "Who is he?"

"I have no idea," answered Father Brown, "but I want you to find out. He went down there," and he jerked his thumb over his shoulder in one of his undistinguished gestures. "He couldn't have passed three lamp-posts yet. I only want to know the direction in which he is going"

Flambeau gazed at father Brown for some time, then rising from the table, he went out.
